INTRODUCTION

Creative writing is based more on manifestation rather than on expression. It does not inform, rather it reveals. So it bears no reference. The best creative writing is critical, and the best critical writing is creative. This article is an outcome of thinking about creative writing meant for a general readership. As such, I have adopted a free style methodology so that everyone can enjoy the pleasure of reading. As you might know, Francis Bacon (1561-1626), the immortal essayist, wrote many essays namely 'Of Love', 'Of Friendship', 'Of Ambition', 'Of Studies', and so on. The multiple-minded genius correctly pointed out that all the words of the dictionary can be used as themes for essays. But little has been done since his death to continue or finish his monumental task. Bacon's unique individual style of presentation ignited my imagination and encouraged me to write creative essays as a method of relieving a wide range of emotions through catharsis.

ARTICLE

Thinking is to form an idea. It implies the entrance of an idea into one's mind with or without deliberate consideration or reflection. For example: I just thought of a good joke.

It is someone's ideas or opinions. For example: What's the thinking behind the decision to combine the two departments?

It is the action of using one's mind to produce thoughts.

It is judgement. For example: I'd like to know your thinking on this.

It is thought that is characteristic as of a period, group, or person e.g., the current student thinking on fraternities.

It is marked by use of the intellect. It implies rational e.g., thinking citizens.

It is the process of considering or reasoning about something. For example: The selectors have some thinking to do before the match.

It is the process of forming an opinion or idea about something, or the opinions or ideas formed by this process. For example: I feel that his thinking is outdated in some ways. Several new books have changed my thinking about terrorism.

It is the process of using the mind to understand matters, make judgments, and solve problems. For example: I've done some serious thinking about our relationship. Thinking, for me, is hard work!

It is using thought or rational judgement. It implies intelligent. For example: He seemed a thinking man.

Think is to believe something or have an opinion or idea. For example: I don't think Emma will get the job.

Not think much of somebody or something means to have a low opinion of someone or something. For example: I didn't think much of her latest book.

It is to consider a person's needs or wishes. For example: She's always thinking of others.

It is to use the brain to decide to do something. For example: I'm thinking about buying a new car.

Thinking people use their minds to consider things carefully. For example: All thinking people realize that we must stop wasting our natural resources.

Thinking discloses the state and status of the concerned person for a particular moment i.e., time. Good thinking paves the way to be great. In contrast, bad thinking renders a person polluted. It corrupts the soul. It degrades the mental status of any person.

Good thinking escorts from dark to light and bad thinking escorts from light to dark.

It is easy to be bad. But it is difficult to be good. Further, it is easier to be bad to worse to worst. In contrast it very difficult to be good to better to the best one.

To remain bad no care is required. It is automatic like a spring that comes out of a hill spontaneously. It is just like ill weeds grow apace. But to hold the state of goodness is difficult. It is more difficult to hold it for long.

If a person wants to be bad no preparation is required. But goodness is not easily available. It needs constant practice. It demands will force. Strong determination is an effective tool. Only a blessed soul gets this divine force.

Upward movement i.e., upliftment is too difficult. Downward journey i.e., downfall is too easy.

Thinking manifests the motif or intention of someone.

There are two types of persons. The first category always thinks better. They are like philanthropist. No force can divert them from holy thinking.

The second type always thinks evil. They always think to harm others. They enjoy sadistic pleasure.

Thinking is alias akin to imagination. Either thinking gives birth to imagination or imagination gives birth to thinking or both give birth to both simultaneously. As such both are complimentary to each other. They are quite inseparable.

Thinking depends upon the intellect or power of imagination of the concerned person. Where science ends philosophy begins. As such highest power of imagination is enjoyed by a philosopher. They say, "The more you read, the more you learn". Similar is the thinking. The more you think, the more you think better. It is just like practice that makes a man perfect.

The wise can think. The wiser can think more. The wisest can think most. In the language of mathematics degree of imagination is directly proportional to degree of knowledge. As such an illiterate person cannot think more due to lack in knowledge thereby imagination.

Someone likes to think. He enjoys it. Someone likes not to think. He feels it as boredom. Someone bothers to think. He does whatever comes in his mind. He is always interested with the instant present. He seldom cares for the repercussion of the future. In future he faces the situation if he can. He faces not if he cannot. He is so whimsical. As such he loses so much from cradle to coffin. He is so loser.

A thinker does not think always. If he allows the brain then the brain thinks deeply on the concerned matter otherwise not. He thinks and takes decision accordingly. He seldom does anything without thinking. It is his orientation. He does not like to do anything being driven by reckless emotion. He may keep some thinking as pending. Later on in leisure hours when he is free from other engagements he recollects the matter and proceeds meticulously. He decides after thinking thoroughly and deeply as well considering all ins and outs of the concerned matter.

Man likes to think something that offers pleasure e.g., childhood. Childhood is alias and akin to nostalgia. It is noted for being free from cares and anxieties. As man grows older happiness of childhood disappears just like dewdrops that disappear with the rise of scorching sun.

Further man likes not to think that thing that offers pain e.g., betrayal or desertion. Generally, a person does not or cannot disbelieve someone. But it hurts him much if the near or dear ones betrays. Desertion by lover pains someone most.

Sometimes he becomes bound to think something that may not be liked by him. Man avoids fearful thinking. He avoids remembering the incident of hatred shown to him that caused shame to him. Such an incident causes anger. Someone takes revenge. Someone tries to forget and really forgets the incident. So he refrains himself from taking revenge. He knows that one revenge gives birth to another one and so on. He is so judicious.

Someone can think many topics simultaneously. It is an attribute of his brain. It is an added quality. It keeps him always ahead than others. This special capacity helps someone to realise his ambition early in comparison with others. In contrast, someone cannot think many topics at a time. He thinks one by one. He is slow but steady. He is suitable for regular job. But he is not suitable for crisis period like war or urgency. In such a case prompt thinking is the only tool to overcome the situation.

Thinking is alias and akin to physical pain. Very few persons can bear that pain. This answers why we notice few successful persons around us.

Thinking thereby imagination is the only tool for any scientific investigation. It unlocks the truth. Thinking gives birth to several hypotheses. Proof laurels it as theory. Theory is singular and unique in nature.

Trial and error method is the best method for its thoroughness. Through this method the researcher finds out the truth. All these are the outcome of thinking itself. Here lies its importance. Here lies its greatness. They say where goodness ends greatness begins. That's why thinking is the greatest of all. There is no substitute of thinking. Thinking itself is its substitute. One thinking may be replaced by another thinking only.

The outcome of thinking of a matured brain is always better. All cannot attain equal maturity with the attainment of higher age. It is a personality trait. It depends on various factors. A woman has to face more difficulties than a man. So women gather more experience due to physiological and social factors. In patriarchal society social dogma corners a woman severely. As such women become more matured than men. It is a fact that during war women and children are the worst victims.

CONCLUSION

A thinker likes to think to get relief through catharsis. Also he likes to remain in vacant mood thus to get relief from the cares and anxieties of hard reality. It is a dual role. It is a unique style. They say no politics is also a politics. Then no thinking is also thinking. The learned knows it. He practises it. He enjoys it. He enjoys life to the lees. It is his rare individual style.
